Brian Plow, an Assistant Professor of Electronic Media and Film at Towson University, produced and directed Home (2008), a documentary that examines the story of baseball, urban redevelopment and the human cost of bringing them to York, PA.

This is a story of an American urban space and its complex transformation. It is also the story of one woman's experience, leaving her home of 50 years, starting over and perhaps paying the biggest price of all for baseball and the city.
